SEASON NOTES

- Fall stems carry a genuine peak-season premium: September–October is peak Northeast wedding season and dahlias, garden roses and butterfly ranunculus all price up.
- Entry price held at $95 to stay under Wyckoff Florist's $150 ceiling; margin recovered at Signature and Statement where the expensive focal stems concentrate.
- Statement is a long, low runner piece — a genuinely larger build than a standard large arrangement, priced accordingly.

PALETTE I

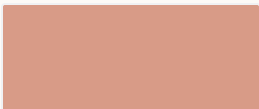

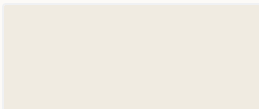

Burnt Ember

Rust, clay, candied ginger, cream

STYLE

The most extroverted of the three. Warm, spiced and sunlit, built on a single long draping line of amaranthus falling from the low side, with deliberate negative space held open on the high side. Copper beech gives the silhouette its width; the café au lait dahlia is the still point everything else moves around. One chartreuse bloom keeps it modern rather than rustic — without it the palette reads as harvest decor.

PALETTE II

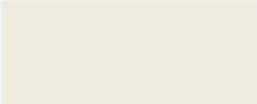

Olive Smoke

Burnt olive, green envy, smoke, cream

STYLE

The most restrained palette we've run. Herbal, architectural, almost entirely green and grey, with the cream spider chrysanthemum doing the work a focal bloom would normally do. Olive branches set a wide horizontal axis; smokebush adds the darker mass low and centre. This one lives or dies on negative space — under-fill it. The single toffee accent is what stops it reading cold.

PALETTE III

Mahogany Dusk

Red mahogany, foxglove, toffee

STYLE

The evening palette. Deep maroon dahlias carry the mass; antique dusty-rose garden roses lift it so the whole thing doesn't sink into shadow. Astilbe and clematis vine supply the movement — the vine should trail well past the vessel on one side only. Designed to hold a candlelit table, so it is built to read at low light: keep the dusty pink forward, the maroon behind it.
